

If you think about it, an answer in physics is fundamentally just a permutation of n number of characters sequenced together to form a string. As hard as these answers are to discover, they are trivially simple to prove.