

Labor Unions

[Working on this...]

People think labor unions are a balance between workers and business owners—they're not. Labor unions are a balance between union members and non-union members, which in addition to business owners also include non-union workers and consumers.